

STUDIES IN LINGUISTICS AND APPLIED LINGUISTICS

RICHARD REPKA

Contents

Preface

1 Functional and cognitive grammar

2 Communication models and their use in various theories of language

3 Language functions and discourse

4 Mood and modality in English and Slovak

5 The gerund in English and its use after prepositions in the noun phrase

6 Notes on the direct object in English and Slovak

7 Notes on the indirect object in English and Slovak

8 Functional linguistics and its influence on the teaching of English and other foreign languages

9 Implementation of discourse principle in English language teaching

10 Objectives, input, and function of output

This book is a collection of studies and articles published in the proceedings from various conferences, symposia and seminars, as well as in linguistic and applied linguistic journals. Only two of my contributions have not been published yet. They are the studies in which I focus my attention on the nature and status of both the direct object and the indirect object in English and Slovak.

The topics discussed in this book represent my professional interests and my research work over a long period of time. For nearly all my professional life, I have been attracted by functional linguistics. First it was functional structuralism of the Prague School of Linguistics, the Holliday's systemic—functional grammar, and last but not least Langacker's cognitive grammar.

Cena: 6,10 €

ISBN: 978-80-89267-79-8

Rok vydania: 2012